Shewing, how he was bound apprentice to a rich linnen draper at London. How he married and set up for himself. How his master and other rich men of the trade plotted his ruin, because he sold cheaper than they did. How they led him and his wife into all manner of extravagance. How they thereby brought him into necessity. How they used him after they had brought him into a dependence upon them. And how he was at last totally undone, and obliged to turn Hawker and pedlar, being a short account of the several methods practised by the old rich dealers at London, for the undoing of young beginners, and thereby monopolizing the whole trade to themselves; 2 p. l., 14, [1] p. 18 cm.; GK entry number 06877.5.
