Politics

Touching the Kings answer to the propositions of both Houses upon the whole treaty, whether they were satisfactory or not satisfactory? Wherein the satisfactoriness of the Kings answers to the propositions for settlement of a firm lasting peace, and future security of the subjects against all feared regal invasions, and encroachments whatsoever is clearly demonstrated. As likewise, that there is no other probable or possible way to settle a speedy firm and lasting peace, but by the Houses embracing and proceeding upon the large extraordinary concessions of the King in the treaty, for the kingdoms present weal and future security. And that the armies remonstrance, Nov. 20. is a way to speedy and certain ruine; and a meer plot of the Jesuites to defame and destroy us. Put into writing, and published by him at the importunate request of divers members, for the satisfaction of the whole kingdom, touching the Houses vote upon this debate; [27], 119, [1] p. 4^o.; GK entry number 01114.

Profit, conveniency, and pleasure, to the whole nation. Being a short rational discourse, lately presented to his majesty, concerning the high-ways of England: their badness, the causes thereof, the reasons of those causes, the impossibility of ever having them well-mended according to the old way of mending. But may most certainly be done, and for ever so maintained (according to this new way) substantially, and with very much ease.
