*A*cknowledgements

First of all, a very special thank you to Antony Lorraine who put us on the trail of the lists found in the Quebec Morning Chronicle. We would also like to express our thanks to Michel de Courval and Pierre Demers who, throughout the publication process, always listened to our needs.

Our gratitude is also directed toward all the Parks Canada personnel who helped us. We would particularly like to mention the involvement of those people who, at one time or another, were part of the Grosse Île project research team. Our colleagues Christine Chartré, Rémi Chénier, Yvon Desloges, René Gélinas, Robert Grace, Johanne Lachance, André Sévigny and Sylvie Tremblay all contributed in their diverse ways to the completion of this listing. Noëlla Gauthier also shared in our work when it came time to do the editing and word processing. We offer all of these people our most heartfelt thanks.

Introduction

THE PRESENT REGISTER HAS BEEN DRAWN UP ESSENTIALLY TO MAKE AVAILABLE to the general public some of the information on family histories that was collected during the research stages of developing Grosse Île and the Irish Memorial National Historic Site. Given that most passenger lists dating back to the first half of the 19th century have been lost, this publication takes on a special significance for it somewhat personalizes the vast migratory movement which characterized that period of Canadian history.

This register contains two lists of names of those who died and groups together emigrants, quarantine station employees, and sailors. The first list identifies mainly those who died and were buried at the Grosse Île quarantine station during the 24-week shipping season in 1847. The second lists a number of emigrants who died on the ships, at sea and in quarantine, during the same season. Most of the names on these lists come from the deaths listed in the Quebec Morning Chronicle during the summer and autumn of 1847, at the request of the authorities.

By lifting the cloak of anonymity that shrouded these deaths at sea and on Grosse Île, we wish above all to pay homage, some 150 years later, to the thousands of unfortunate people, most of whom were of Irish origin, who invested so much effort in the hope of improving their lot in life, only to have that hope so unfortunately dissipated along the way.

A sombre record

The 1847 wave of emigration was unquestionably a significant event of the 19th century. At the port of Québec City, the rate of newly arriving emigrants, a total of 90 150 people, was triple the average of the preceding years. This emigration was first and foremost Irish since Ireland was going through the worst year of the Great Famine. Already weakened by malnutrition and deprivation, the Irish emigrants were crowded aboard filthy sailing ships unfit for human transportation. They arrived in deplorable condition and a number of them were sick with typhus which quickly spread to epidemic proportions. In 1847, the number of hospitalizations that occurred between the emigrants' departure in Europe and their arrival somewhere in Canada was very high and affected approximately one half of the emigrants who landed in Québec City in 1847. The mortality rate also reached record levels, affecting eighteen percent of the emigrants heading for Québec City (Table 1). This sombre record remained unchallenged throughout the 19th century.

PREPARATIONS FOR EMBARKATION
ON THE WHARFS OF LIVERPOOL.
(McGill University, McLellan Library,
Illustrated London News, July 6, 1850.)

A quick analysis of the mortality rate on board ship and in quarantine clearly identifies the ports of departure with the worst reports: Liverpool (England) and Cork (Ireland) (Table 2). Vessels leaving Liverpool had a mean of 58.8 deaths per average 375.5 passengers, a mortality rate of almost 16%. Ships out of Cork reflected a similar toll to that of Liverpool: a mean of 58.3 deaths out of an average of 312.8 passengers, for a death rate of about 19%. This poses an enormous contrast to the ships coming from the German ports of Bremen and Hamburg, where the death rate varied between 0.01% and 0.02% of the average number of travellers. In fact, some contaminated ships came close to total tragedy. Over 56% of the passengers on the Naomi and the Virginus coming from Liverpool died at sea or in quarantine. Some 44% of the emigrants aboard the Avon and the Bee, which set out from Cork, had already died when their ship arrived in Québec City! Of the 442 vessels that arrived at the port of Québec City in 1847, over 35 ships from Liverpool and Cork had a death toll of over 15%.

This situation tends to confirm what Dr. Douglas and emigration agent Buchanan had to say at the end of the 1847 season: in addition to the overcrowded ships, the poor hygienic conditions and the lack of food on board, the high toll of the 1847 season can be attributed to the condition of the emigrants before they embarked on the journey as well as the latent presence of the germ of the disease amongst them. The ships coming from Liverpool and Cork transported mainly Irish emigrants who were already very much affected and weakened by the Famine.

INTRODUCTION

The total number of deaths on the ships and at the quarantine station, estimated at 8745, accounts for 50% of all the deaths amongst the emigrants of 1847 who passed in transit through Québec City. The total number of deaths on board ship is an astonishing 5293, a little more than 5% of all the emigrants who set sail. This figure includes deaths at sea, those on the ships at the moment of the quarantine and, according to Buchanan, the deaths of 11 women in child-birth. The average age of those who died on the boats is 20. Human losses at the quarantine station number 3452, of which 3238 were registered in the hospital and 214 others were amongst the so-called "healthy emigrants". Spread over the 24 weeks the quarantine station was operating in 1847, this works out to an average of 144 deaths per week (Table 3). The average age at the time of death was 24.4 years.

It is more difficult to provide the precise number of people who were buried on Grosse Île than it is to determine the number of deaths at sea. Nevertheless, the number 5424, which is inscribed on the Medical Officers' Monument, would seem to be the maximum possible (Table 4). The calculation becomes rather difficult because the number of deaths which occurred on board the ships while in quarantine at Grosse Île is not accurate; it is not known how many bodies were removed from the ships to be buried at the cemetery on Grosse Île. The data furnished by superintendent Douglas between December 1847 and February 1848 accounts for 4292 burials on Grosse Île in 1847, of which 3452 were deaths on the island, and 842 deaths on board the quarantined ships. However, according to the data taken from the register of ships inspected at Grosse Île and the register of arrivals in Québec City, the total number of deaths is calculated at 3501 in the hospital on Grosse Île plus 1190 on the quarantined ships, for a total of 4691 burials. In an 1848 report, Bishop Mountain states that approximately 5400 bodies were buried on Grosse Île during the 1847 season. And finally, in another report of statistics compiled some time later and annexed to the hospitalization records of Grosse Île for the year 1897, it is recorded that there were 3226 deaths in hospital and 2198 deaths on the quarantined ships or during the landing of sick emigrants before they could be hospitalized. Despite the divergences in these reports, the various figures given provide an idea of the dimension of the tragedy and tend to confirm the maximum number of 5424 burials in the cemeteries of the Grosse Île quarantine station in 1847.

The cemeteries on Grosse Île

Two of the three cemeteries on Grosse Île are linked to the deaths of 1847. The largest, which is situated on the south-west peninsula of the island, is likely the resting place of the remains of most of the people who died in hospital or on the ships in quarantine during the 1847 season. Because of the high rate of daily mortality, the bodies were buried in mass graves lined up in rectangular rows along the north-south axis of the island. According to certain accounts, the remains were all laid in wooden coffins then placed one on top another in three rows. Thus, despite the urgency of the situation in 1847, the mortal remains seem to have been interred in a most respectful manner.

INTRODUCTION

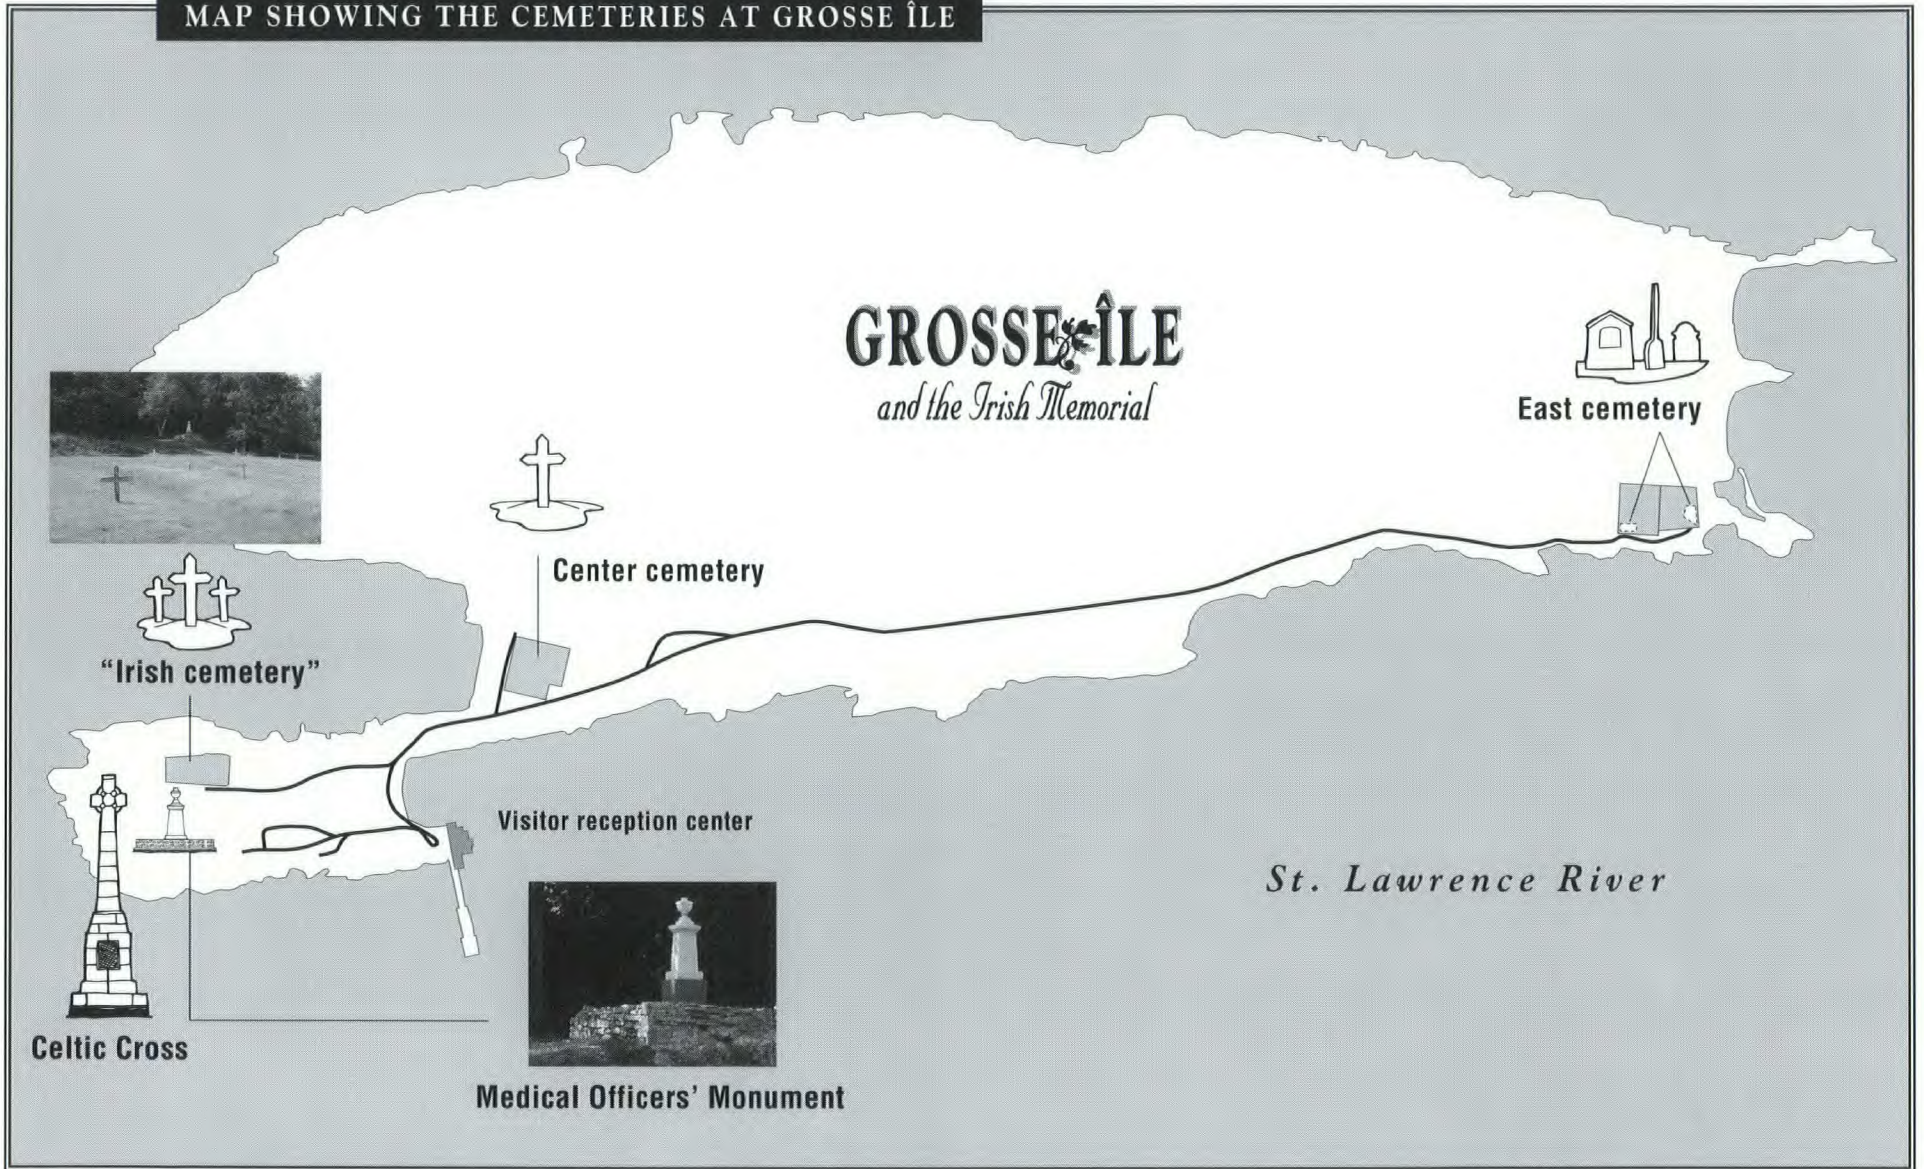

This cemetery, which was set up during the first quarantine season in 1832, is known today as the "Irish cemetery" after the main victims of the 1847 typhus epidemic. For this reason, it remains one of the most important witnesses to the 1847 tragedy. The surface of the cemetery today is still marked by the alternating mounds and furrows created by the rows of coffins which have settled into the earth over the years. A second cemetery located at the east end of the island probably contains the remains of those who died in the "healthy division" which was set up in this eastern sector of the island during the summer of 1847.

The cemeteries are amongst the most important cultural and symbolic assets of the national historic site that Grosse Île has become. Mrs. Jeannette Vekeman-Masson, who was born and lived on Grosse Île at the beginning of the century, puts it so well, "the immigrants rest there in peace. Most of them were fleeing poverty and seeking a promised land. They found it on Quarantine Island. Now they sleep in a enchanting and peaceful place, and we should not disturb their dreams." [translation] (Grand-maman raconte la Grosse Île, Corporation pour la mise en valeur de Grosse-Ile inc., Sainte-Foy, Éditions La Liberté, 1981, p. 147).

The lists

The two lists presented in this index include a total of 8308 entries. The first contains the names of 3879 people buried on Grosse Île in 1847. These are mainly the people who died in hospital or in the quarantine station's "healthy division"; added to these are names of emigrants who died on the quarantined ships and whose deaths were recorded in the register of burials at the Anglican and Catholic chapels.

The first list is divided into three parts: emigrants (3826), sailors (38) and employees (15) who died and were interred on Grosse Île. In each of these groups, the names appear in alphabetical order and each entry includes the family name, given name, age (if available), name of the ship and its port of departure, the country in which the emigrant boarded ship, and the date of death, in that order. In most cases, the date mentioned is an indication of the week in which the death occurred, including the first and last days of that week. If the date mentioned is followed by an asterisk (*), it indicates the date of burial.

The second list, taken mainly from the Quebec Morning Chronicle, contains the names of 4429 people who died on the ships, at sea or in quarantine. Even if we know that the emigrants who died on the ships during the quarantine period were buried on Grosse Île, we unfortunately cannot distinguish them from those who died during the voyage. Once again, the names appear in alphabetical order and each entry includes the family name, given name, age, name of the ship, its port of departure, and the country the emigrant left from. Since we do not have a precise date of death, we have chosen to indicate the interval during which the death occurred by presenting, for each individual, the date of departure from Europe and the date of the ship's arrival in Québec City. The difference in figures between 5293, the total number of deaths on the ships at sea and in quarantine, and 4429, the number of names presented in this index, could probably be explained by the fact that the names of infants under one year of age who died during the voyage were not recorded.

WEEKLY RETURN OF SICK IN THE QUARANTINE HOSPITAL GROSSE ISLE FROM 16 TO 22 MAY 1847. ONE OF ONLY TWO HANDWRITTEN HOSPITALIZATION REPORTS BY MEDICAL SUPERINTENDENT GEORGE MELLIS DOUGLAS THAT ARE AVAILABLE FOR 1847. (NAC, PRO, C042/542, fol. 171, microfilm reel-407.)

The names appearing in this index were gathered from a variety of often handwritten sources by a number of researchers who respected the variant spellings encountered in the various reference documents. Preparing these lists for publication thus required painstaking attention to detail in order to avoid confusion amongst the variant forms. For this reason, the spelling of family names has been standardized. However, we leave it up to the reader to draw the obvious links between names such as Barron and Barrow, or Reilly and O'Reilly...

Sometimes the same name appears on both lists, since the Anglican registers indicate on which ship in quarantine an emigrant died. It should be mentioned here that the Catholic and Anglican chapel registers as well as the Quebec Morning Chronicle identify deaths of emigrants coming from boats that were not registered on the ships inspection lists at Grosse Île or in Québec City. Could these ships have been local vessels plying the St. Lawrence and carrying passengers who landed downstream? At this point, we don't know.

We also came across some married women's maiden names which are listed in appendix 1 of this register. These names are entered as follow: Barry, Margaret, 32 years, Avon, Cork, Ireland, see Reilly, Margaret. We felt that the list of ships which stopped at the quarantine station before arriving at the port of Québec City in 1847 would also be an indispensable tool for those researching family history. This appendix contains 478 entries including the sailing country, the number of ships from same origine, the average number of passengers, the mean of deaths on the voyage and in quarantine at Grosse Île.

Handwritten text in French, likely a medical or official report, mentioning 'M. B. Cox' and 'Grosse Ile'.

FROM 1832 TO 1837, GROSSE ÎLE served as a quarantine station for the Port of Québec City, where most immigrants to Canada arrived in the years before the First World War. What is now the Grosse Île and the Irish Memorial National Historic Site witnessed many historic events over the years, including a terrible typhus epidemic in 1847, which coincided with the worst year of the Great Famine in Ireland.

This Register lists the names of emigrants, employees and sailors who died and were buried on Grosse Île in 1847, as well as emigrants who died at sea during the crossing or aboard ships while in quarantine off Grosse Île. The names of 8,508 victims were gathered from various archival sources. Their descendants, along with historians and genealogists, will find here a wealth of information not previously available. A short introduction and tables provide further details on that tragic summer, and illustrations add to our understanding of the time.
